

Claims: I claim:

that the article is invented for the sole purpose of absorbing moisture and water from the body when the body needs drying. It has front and back panels that come in different lengths and widths. It has one fastener on each side for the shorter lengths and two fasteners on each side for the longer lengths. Both sides are detached. At the top there is stitching to hold the article together going from left to right which allows the article to lay on the shoulders, and leaving a space in the middle for the head to slip through.
